Reasons for Allowance

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Claims 25-31 are allowed primarily in view of the essential limitations to an elastomer for molding, containing polypropylene-b-poly(ethylene-co-propylene), characterized by having, inter alia, "(a) polypropylene segments and poly(ethylene-co-propylene) segments ... linked chemically." (Claim 25, lines 1-2 and 7-8.)

Applicants' arguments directed to the above limitations, particularly those presented on pages 3-4 of the latest response, are well taken. In addition, examiner notes the statement in Matthews et al that at the end of the first polymerization sequence, "the reaction mixture is thought to contain non-living polypropylene (resin) and living polypropylene." (Col. 4, lines 16-18.) Since the non-living polypropylene chains will not copolymerize with the ethylene added in the next polymerization sequence of Matthews et al, the resultant polymer composition would expectedly contain polypropylene segments that are not chemically linked to the ethylene-propylene copolymer segments, contrary to characteristic (a) of the instantly claimed elastomer.

Further, as noted by applicants, the polymer of Matthews et al is essentially a homologue of the comparative experiments (l) and (m) of comparative experiments I-5 on page 50 of the present application. In Table I-1-1 herein, Comparative Examples I-4 and I-5, which employ the comparative copolymers (l) and (m), show a much lower ratio (after extraction/before extraction) of ethylene content of copolymer segments (EL: wt. %), versus inventive Examples I-1 through I-8. As per page 39 of the specification, this ratio is a measurement of the remaining poly(ethylene-co-propylene) segments chemically linked to polypropylene segments. Thus the Matthews et al polymer, by analogy, would be expected to display a comparably low ratio (after extraction/before extraction) of ethylene content of copolymer segments, indicating the polypropylene segments and ethylene-propylene copolymer segments of that polymer are not linked chemically, as required by claim 25 hereof.

Accordingly, claims 25-31 are deemed to define allowable subject matter and are passed to issue.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
